

Nicole Elliott is a freelance designer working in Baltimore. She spent nearly 20 years at National Geographic working alongside art directors, photographers, and designers as an image editor and book production director. She has cultivated a deep understanding of what makes a beautiful photograph and an appreciation for the patience, talent, and luck required to get the shot. She is inspired by images and the stories behind them.